Loma Linda University Cancer Center
Proton Charity Invitational

Loma Linda University Cancer Center is known around the world for proton radiation treatment and research. Those who have participated in this annual golf event have helped to make this happen. The Loma Linda University Proton Charity Invitational was started 28 years ago to help clinicians and researchers to continue their work in aiding people in the fight against cancer. It will be hosted by John Cook at The Club at Morningside — the first Jack Nicklaus-designed course in the Coachella Valley. Our supporters look forward to this event each year, and we look forward to working with them to make this day a success.
